Report on "IPR in Research Life"

Objectives:

1. To educate students and faculty about the integration of IPR in research and academic pursuits.
2. To provide insights into the application of IPR in advanced fields like Chemistry.
3. To encourage research scholars to consider intellectual property protection in their work.

Event Summary:

The IPR Cell of the college organized a one-day lecture titled "IPR in Research Life" on 10th January 2023. The event featured Dr. S. R. Kuchekar, former Principal of Home Science Women's College, Loni, as the guest speaker. Dr. Kuchekar delivered an insightful session on the importance of Intellectual Property Rights in research. He specifically addressed postgraduate Chemistry students, explaining how to integrate IPR concepts into their research work. The session highlighted the role of IPR in protecting innovative ideas and fostering advancements in science and technology.

Dr. Omkar Rasal, Principal of the college, encouraged students to embrace new knowledge in IPR and its applications in their respective fields of study. Prof. Hamid Shaikh, Coordinator of the IPR Cell, efficiently managed the program. The vote of thanks was delivered by Prof. Kabir Inamdar from the Chemistry Department, acknowledging the efforts of the guest speaker and the organizing team.

Number of participants: 45

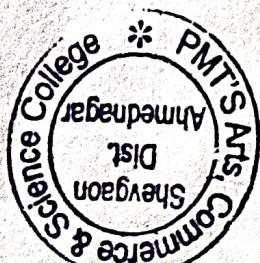

Outcomes:

1. Enhanced understanding of the role of IPR in research among students and faculty.
2. Practical knowledge on linking Chemistry research with IPR.
3. Motivation for postgraduate students to safeguard their innovations through intellectual property rights.

Conclusion:

The one-day lecture on "IPR in Research Life" was a well-organized and informative event. It successfully educated participants about the significance of IPR in research and encouraged them to apply it in their academic and professional endeavors. The collaborative efforts of the IPR Cell, the guest speaker, and the Chemistry Department made the program a success.
